TOKYO — Six leading global companies have become the newest partners in the TOMODACHI Initiative, a ground-breaking public-private partnership. The TOMODACHI Initiative was launched following the Great East Japan Earthquake by the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo and the U.S.-Japan Council, an educational non-profit organization, with the support of the Government of Japan.

Honda Motor Co, Metlife Alico Life Insurance KK, Prudential Financial, Inc, Sumitomo Corp, Suntory Holdings Limited and Toshiba Corp are the latest companies to contribute to TOMODACHI, which invests in the next generation of leaders on both sides of the Pacific to strengthen cultural and economic ties between the United States and Japan.

The contributions from these six top firms - amounting to over $6 million - will create new TOMODACHI Programs. These programs will allow many young Japanese and Americans to participate in high-quality educational, cultural exchange and leadership programs. These important corporate commitments will provide the skills and opportunities the students need to pursue their dreams, and contribute to strengthening the U.S.-Japan partnership in the future.
